

411 AD

St. Augustine's "City of God."

DONATISM

Condemned by Emperor definitely

Had been previously condemned by Synod of Arles

Held that sacraments were invalid
if minister was unworthy

Constantine Roman General died 411
He was proclaimed emperor by the Roman troops in Britain in 407
and led a revolt in Gaul and Spain against the Western emperor HONORIUS He conquered part of Gaul and through his son CONSTANS took Spain.
Constantine forced recognition from HONORIUS, but his triumph was short. The counterrevolt of GERONTIUS hottelum. Constantine was defeated by HONORIUS's general CONSTANTIUS

(later Emperor CONSTANTIUS III)
Constantine was beheaded.
The withdrawal of Roman troops from Britain had greatly weakened the Roman hold on that island.

411

Council of Carthage
St. Augustine refuted
the PELAGIANS.

IOVINUS, a member of the highest Gallic nobility usurped the imperial authority. A barbarian coalition under Burgundian-Alanic leadership formed the background to this usurpation. As a result, the Burgundians were permitted to establish a kingdom on the left bank of the Rhine. The new emperor permitted in Gaul what the Goths had in vain tried to obtain by force in Italy. The Gallic-Gothic Coalition did not last king. IOVINUS quarreled with ATTALUS because he brought the Goths with him. IOVINUS in 412 also undertook the same journey of Italy and Thracia, finally quelling it from beyond the Alps

AD 411

SYRIAC Martyrology - lists the saints of the West.

411 A.D

St Augustine wrote "The City of God" after sack of Rome
by Alaric

410-415

ATHAULF was Visigothic king.
He succeeded his brother-in-law
ALARIC I.

411/412

ATHALF and the Goths remained in Italy and ravaged the country

411

Athanaulf succeeds Alaric
as King of Visigoths.

Constantine III crushed
by Constantius